

Acknowledgements

The Social Statistics Division of the National Statistical Office gratefully acknowledges the contribution of all the members of the Inter-Ministerial Group on Environmental Economic Accounting, especially the source agencies listed below, for their support and guidance for this publication on Environmental Accounts:

1. Offices of the Department of Agriculture, Cooperation & Farmers Welfare, Soil and Land Use Survey of India and other Organisations of the Ministry of Agriculture & Farmers Welfare;
2. National Remote Sensing Centre, ISRO, Ministry of Space;
3. Department of Land Resources, Ministry of Rural Development;
4. Forest Survey of India, Zoological Survey of India, Botanical Survey of India, Wildlife Institute of India, National Biodiversity Authority, Wetland Division, Project Elephant Division, Statistical Division and other Divisions of Ministry of Environment, Forest & Climate Change; and
5. Wetlands International South Asia.

Acknowledgments are also due to United Nations Statistics Division (UNSD) and United Nations Environment Programme (UN Environment) for providing guidance on the implementation of the System of Environmental Economic Accounting in India, under the project on 'Natural Capital Accounting and Valuation of Ecosystem Services' piloted by the European Union in India. A special mention also needs to be made of the Victoria University of Wellington, who have been providing technical guidance to the NCAVES project countries.

The Division is also thankful to all the named and unnamed contributors of the material used for this publication and the permissions granted for copyright material. While every effort has been made, it has not always been possible to identify the sources of all the material used, or to trace all copyright holders. The Division shall ensure inclusion of the appropriate acknowledgements/references on reprinting, if any omissions are brought to its notice.

Generally, every day is a new challenge but the year 2020 has brought about unforeseen change. With each one of us trying to innovate and adapt to the new circumstances, the Division is thankful to unstinting cooperation from each of the agencies cited above that has helped the Division in exploring new areas and subjects and adhere to the planned schedule.
